I consider it not to be legally compliant or sound because of various alarming issues in Paddock Wood. They are the vastly increased danger of flooding resulting from the enormous amount of proposed new housing; the wholesale destruction of wildlife and biodiversity; the unnecessary loss of whole swathes of farmland that will be so sorely needed in coming years as the population of the UK increases exponentially due to uncontrolled mass immigration; the spread of disease resulting from multiple and probably catastrophic flooding events, the lack of infrastructure needed to accommodate all of the new residents; the lack of proposed new schools, doctor's surgeries, dentists, shops and a police station to deal with the resulting and inevitable increase in crime; the inability of the roads to contain the sheer amount of new traffic for all of the new residents; and the inability of the train network to accommodate all the new commuters as well.
